What is Strategic Planning?

Strategic planning is a structured process in which the leadership of an organization thinks carefully about the “big picture”, about things like:

- What does the organization look like today? What are its strengths? Its weaknesses?
- What is its audience or market now?
- What is happening in that audience that should lead to changes in this organization, what it does, and how it does what it does?
- Is there a new market or audience emerging, and what does that mean for the organization?
- Are there things happening around it that will create new opportunities? New challenges?
- Where does the leadership think the organization should be going? What does it have to do to get there? How will it know when it succeeds?
- What should the organization look like in the future? What does it need to be doing? For whom? How does it need to be doing that?

Strictly-speaking, Strategic Planning is not about tactics and implementation, although the most powerful Strategic Plan will never achieve its potential if the tactical planning essential to putting it into action is not well executed.

And that happens all too often – and is the reason why Strategies 4 Impact! also helps its clients translate their strategy into action.

Most organizations adopt a “planning cycle”, often 3 – 4 years. It is usually unrealistic to attempt to plan any further out than that. At the same time this cycle provides ample time to develop and execute the tactical planning necessary to implement the Strategic Plan. Creating the Strategic Plan involves the organization’s leadership - often a Board of Directors - and the management team, and most often occurs during an event – a Retreat - that is held for the sole purpose of planning.

Many groups also schedule an “annual checkup” on their Strategic Plan and its implementation. Is it proceeding on schedule? Are the necessary leadership and resources being consistently committed for success?

And, very importantly, have circumstances changed, necessitating some revisions to the Strategic Plan?

What does a Strategic Plan look like?

There are lots of different models for Strategic Plans. The model Strategies 4 Impact! works from is goal-focused, and includes:

- Vision Statement – what the “future state” of the organization will look like ... “WestJet will be the leading low-fare airline that: People will want to work with ... Customers want to fly with ... and Shareholders want to invest in.”
- Mission Statement – what the organization will focus on doing ... “Aecon – Building Things That Matter”
- Values Statement – those over-arching ethical principles that will guide the organization all day, every day and in everything it does ... principles like responsibility, accountability, professionalism, integrity, commitment
- Operating philosophy – the rules of engagement for the leadership and for those it leads, describing how the organization will behave ... things like exceeding expectations, delivering value, being innovative, communicating, being cost effective, embracing change
- Strategic Goals – those specific goals and objectives that will lead to successfully fulfilling the Vision and Mission ... each planning cycle typically identifies 3 to 5 broad strategic goals on which the organization will focus its energy and resources – goals like “become the market leader”; each broad goal can have a number of “sub-goals” or objectives – stepping stones to achieving the broad goal – perhaps “deploy new technology to improve customer service”
- Critical Success Factors – the metrics that identify how the organization knows it has achieved its goals and furthered its mission - “our sales exceed those of any of our competitors”

Then again, every organization is different. Strategies 4 Impact! doesn’t impose a formula on its clients but adapts this model to meet their specific, individual needs and objectives, ensuring highest value results from the process.

Why do Strategic Planning? What are the benefits?

Strategic Planning is critical for any organization that wants to excel at doing what it does.

Whether it's an association serving and representing its members' interests, a business that wants to earn the most profit that it can and be best in its class, or a non-profit group that provides community and social services, every organization has to plan well in order to succeed.

A solid Strategic Plan defines and shapes the organization.

It provides the framework for and informs every decision and every action, every hour of every day.

It helps the organization maintain its focus and direction – and in business, its competitive edge.

The Strategic Plan helps optimize the return on investment of human, financial and technical resources.

It helps ensure that the organization consistently delivers greatest value for its audience or market, whatever the nature and purpose of its activities may be.

The Strategic Plan is the "score" used by the leadership to "conduct the orchestra". And it is essential in helping each of the "musicians" in that orchestra play their part in concert with the others.

Not only does it lead to success for the organization, it also contributes to the personal and professional fulfillment of those that lead and work in it.

And, a Strategic Plan is instrumental in "telling the world" about the organization, and what it does so well.

How does Strategic Planning work?

Most organizations engage a professional facilitator like Strategies 4 Impact! to guide them through the process.

As an outsider, a good facilitator brings a fresh perspective and challenges participants to "think outside of the box". An experienced facilitator will first encourage "blue sky" creative brainstorming and the "lateral thinking" that is critical to successful Strategic Planning, and then will work to build consensus and guide the planners to specific, clearly-stated conclusions that are objective, realistic and achievable.

Here's a look at the process Strategies 4 Impact! typically uses when facilitating Strategic Planning.

It centres around an off-site Strategic Planning Retreat, and includes:

- extensive preparation by Strategies 4 Impact! in the months before the Retreat in order to maximize return on investment of participants' time and energy
- Strategies 4 Impact! facilitating the Retreat itself, and
- Strategies 4 Impact! guiding and supporting the critically-important follow-up which will ultimately determine the success of the whole Strategic Planning process

Again, every one of our clients is different, and Strategies 4 Impact! modifies its approach to get the best results and provide the highest value on each assignment.

Phase 1 – Research and Synthesis

To make the most of the investment that participants will make in the Strategic Planning process and to lead to the most successful outcome, Strategies 4 Impact! will:

- a. spend time with individuals in leadership/management, as well as the leadership team as a whole, to better understand the organization, what it does, its audience or market, its current strategies and objectives
- b. carry out independent research to help prepare for successful Strategic Planning – this could include things like
 - market research
 - a situational scan to identify broad forces and trends that may affect the organization and its planning – for example: population demographics, the economy, government policy, globalization, social responsibility, climate change
 - stakeholder surveys such as client and employee interviews
- c. synthesize the results of the research in a draft report
- d. review and validate the draft with leadership/management
- e. prepare a final report, incorporating the feedback from leadership/management, that will provide background for participants in the Strategic Planning Retreat

The research and synthesis typically takes place during the 3 to 4 months prior to the Retreat.

Phase 2 – The Strategic Planning Retreat

As touched on earlier, there is a lot of talent and time invested in this Retreat, so it is imperative to make the most of that investment. Strategies 4 Impact! achieves that through careful preparation before the Retreat, and expert facilitation during it.

Experience shows that it's important to hold the Retreat offsite to avoid disruption and encourage participants to focus on their strategic work. The model recommended by Strategies 4 Impact! Inc. is designed to help participants shift their thinking from their day-to-day responsibilities to focus on Strategic Planning for the organization.

Strategies 4 Impact! will:

- a. Prepare background material for participants to review in preparation for the Retreat. This will include the research report from Phase 1, as well as additional information about the Retreat format and its objectives.
- b. Lead and facilitate the retreat. Strategies 4 Impact! recommends a retreat that extends over three consecutive days, although the format can vary depending on the specific needs of the client.

The agenda for the Retreat typically looks something like this:

Day One

Day One usually starts midday or mid-afternoon. We work into the evening and end by 9 pm at the latest. This gives participants time to shift from the day-to-day to the strategic, and at the same time ensures some tangible, early results by the end of Day One. Activities on Day One can include:

- Working Lunch (plenary session)
- Welcome, introduction
- Review of the Game Plan for the Retreat
- Watkinson presents an overview of key material contained in the pre-Retreat briefing package and facilitates discussion of that material
- If there are existing Mission, Vision, Values statements, it's good to refresh participants' memories about those now
- Then, Watkinson leads a SWOT (a group brainstorming session that identifies Strengths, Weaknesses, Opportunities, Threats for the organization)
- Break for Dinner (it's important to allow some down time and participant socialization)
- Wrap-up of the SWOT - Revisit, recap and 'vote' to decide which items identified in the SWOT are priorities for further consideration during the development of the Strategic Plan. (Watkinson will have consolidated SWOT items during dinner break.)

Day Two

Having finished at a reasonable time the night before, a fresh and early start sets the pace for the Day Two. The agenda is more demanding on this second day, so it's best to try to break in the late afternoon if things are going well – a bit of reward for participants. Time should be formally scheduled on Day Two for “catch up with email and calls” while we’re still within business hours - this makes it easier for people to shut off the cell phones and Blackberry’s during the day, including during the breaks, and devote their energy and creativity to Strategic Planning.

- Breakfast
- Watkinson presents a recap of previous day’s work, and a SWOT Summary
- General discussion of Strategic Direction based on what has been heard so far, and the SWOT Summary “What is all of this saying to us?”
- Breakout Sessions to begin drafting Strategic Objectives and Critical Success Factors - Participants Break into 2 to 3 groups, coached by Watkinson
- Lunch (Working lunch if necessary)
- Blending the results - Group back in plenary, facilitated by Watkinson, drafting Strategic Objectives and Critical Success Factors – combining the work of the breakout groups
- Dinner followed by social time – and important time to “sleep on” the results so far

Day Three

This is the “flex day”. If the group (and Watkinson) feel that solid progress has been made, it is good to try to wrap up by lunchtime. The rest of the day is scheduled, however, “just in case it’s needed”. Participants are always thrilled to end early on a high note.

- Breakfast
- Watkinson provides a recap of the work thus far
- General discussion of Strategic Direction based on what has happened thus far in the Retreat
- Review of draft Strategic Objectives and Critical Success Factors and further refinement – Watkinson will have done some refinement the evening of Day Two to start things off
- Finalize Strategic Objectives and Critical Success Factors, discuss Gap Analysis
- General discussion of Strategic Direction
- Lunch (working lunch if necessary)
- If there are no current Vision, Mission and Values statements, this is the time to begin piecing those together – they will have been coming up for discussion during the development of Strategic Objectives so it’s a matter of crafting statements that are sufficiently broad to capture the specific goals and objectives; on the other hand, if they are existing, we take one final look to make sure they are current in light of the outcome of the Retreat

- Watkinson provides a review of “next steps”
- c. Strategies 4 Impact! then prepare a concise report documenting the outcomes, suggesting some refinement to the Objectives and Critical Success Factors if helpful to ensure clear communication.

Phase 3 - Transforming Strategy into Tactics

This is a critical step that many companies do not handle well, with the result that the objectives and directions set through Strategic Planning may not be achieved to their full potential.

Strategies 4 Impact! will:

- a. Support and work with the leadership team/management in rounding out the Strategic Plan. This involves synthesizing the outcomes of the Retreat, identifying and fleshing out Tactics, further development of Strategic Directions, and initial analysis of impact on human and financial resources.
- b. This could easily take the form of a leadership team/management workshop to develop the outline tactical planning.

Phase 4 - “Circle Back” Session

- a. Strategies 4 Impact! Inc. facilitates a half- to full-day workshop of the original Retreat participants, usually 4 to 6 weeks after the Retreat. This allows leadership/management to develop draft tactical plans to demonstrate that the Strategic Plan is feasible and achievable. That process also provides an opportunity to assess human and financial resources necessary to implement the Strategic Plan, including any additional investment which may be necessary.

The key objective of this critically-important “Circle Back” session is to validate the Strategic Plan through a “second look” by the original Retreat participants, after some time has passed.

“Annual Checkup”

As touched on earlier, Strategies 4 Impact! recommends that organizations carry out an “annual checkup” on their Strategic Plan and its execution. This can take the form of a “Mini-Retreat”, typically a single day, often combined with some preparatory work by participants the previous evening over dinner. Strategies 4 Impact! will:

- Prepare and distribute a “backgrounder” for review by participants prior to the event – this does not usually require extensive research, but will benefit from detailed input of the leadership team/management in particular on the status of the current Strategic Plan and any changes in circumstances which could call for changes to the plan

- Facilitate the discussions during the day
- Build consensus among participants to ensure there are clear conclusions reached
- Prepare a summary report, or amend the Strategic Planning Report, as necessary to reflect the outcome of the Annual Checkup

Strategies 4 Impact! is often engaged to facilitate the "Annual Checkup" where it has led the development of the Strategic Plan, bringing back to the process its extensive knowledge and understanding of the organization. Strategies 4 Impact! is also engaged for an "Annual Checkup" when it was not the originator, where clients believe they will benefit from a fresh perspective and approach.
